THE PAPER
TRAVEL AND THE OTHER THINGS IN LIFE

Stylish foxes, guarded birds of prey and raspy equines flock together in Ida Lawrence's latest series of wild story-paintings at ISA Art Gallery.

Enter at own risk! Hand sanitiser provided!

Within HOARSE HORSE, Ida Lawrence's creations hang, perch, and fly through the gallery. Her lexicon, consisting of images, narratives, and a joyous approach to language, finds its pulse through an improvisational handling of painted mark, hue and pattern. Her worlds are playful yet uneasy, where humour and tension coexist in vibrant colour. She approaches her canvases as sentient organisms, each painting shedding and mutating in the act of its own creation, though in an incomplete manner, clinging to the ghost of its own skin.

Lawrence's imagery grows out of the everyday: a dragon carved into the door of a village house near Berlin, an eagle sculpture glimpsed behind a net, the gleeful misreading of a street sign or an accidental or mischievous misspelling in written correspondence.

Misinterpretation becomes her method of loosening meaning, letting humour seep through the cracks of the tongue. Her practice returns again and again to the physical pleasure of painting: the tug of the brush, the small shocks of colour, and the joy of letting mistakes, or the illusion of mistakes, camouflage themselves inside the work, as if the work itself were a creature.

The exhibition is accompanied not by a curatorial essay but "by a film by Monika Proba, or perhaps it is the other way around", writes Lawrence in the introductory painting Artist Statement (2025). Playful in nature, Proba's "augmented documentary" offers a portrait of the artist and her creative instincts, interspersed with surprising and imagined realities within her studio habitat.

Tying into the broader ecology of HOARSE HORSE, the public programme extends the exhibition's explorations through an Artist-led interactive talk that unfolds through shared storytelling, dialogue, and participatory actions. Musician and composer Khaled Kurbeh then offers a sonic response within the gallery. His performance brings together cow bells, cat collars, bird-call whistles, field recordings, and improvised electro-acoustic textures, forming an auditory landscape that vibrates in parallel with Lawrence's unsettled worlds.

ARTIST STATEMENT

This exhibition is accompanied by a film by Monika Proba,<sup>1</sup> or perhaps it is the other way around. Monika and I first met in Indonesia in 2011 while we were both studying at ISI Yogyakarta, where sheep were frequently found grazing on campus. Back then, I was dancing like a peacock<sup>2</sup> or a buffalo<sup>3</sup> or a masked clarinet-playing giraffe<sup>4</sup> and Monika and her video camera<sup>5</sup> were chasing kuda lumping.<sup>6</sup> Before we became housemates, I lived around the corner in a kos<sup>7</sup> on the edge of the ricefield, which hummed at night with a chorus of frogs. My room was frequently visited by fireflies, crickets and butterflies while down the road was a flink<sup>8</sup> of cows who I frequently visited<sup>9</sup> and I'd occasionally spy other university students there too.<sup>10</sup> Our first sharehouse had an outdoor kitchen — I used to enjoy cutting vegetables and then chucking the scraps directly into the garden just beyond the stove, where hungry and hopeful chickens would loiter. We once had a snake in the bathroom, which a human visitor discovered while locked inside. We were asked to move out of that house, I suspect because the kepala desa caught us horsing around during jam belajar.<sup>11</sup> While house-hunting, we visited a three storey house in a perumahan complex which had walls stuffed full of antlers with or without their furry heads attached, and unsmiling faces with or without their four-legged bodies attached. We eventually found an old house<sup>12</sup> near campus, which had a very much alive resident tokek<sup>13</sup> in the ceiling and at least one resident rat under the fridge. We rarely cooked there, but a weekend highlight was preparing and devouring scrambled eggs<sup>14</sup> after a pilgrimage to the shops “in the city” for sourdough rolls (a luxury) and butter (utter heaven). Chickens also roamed the yard of this place. I'm sure there were plenty of mosquitoes at both houses, but I can't remember a specific one. On the main road near our place was a warung that served gudeg.<sup>15</sup> I remember Monika once asked for it “tanpa krecek” because she didn't want the usual side serving of cow skin, but the waiter must have heard “tambah krecek” because a moment later out came her gudeg<sup>16</sup> buried under a mountain of fat. That was the end of Monika's vegetarianism.

Ida Lawrence is a Berlin-based artist who delights in bringing stories to life through painting. Her stories, like her travels and exhibitions, meander to Indonesia, Australia, Germany and between. Lawrence's "tallest tale" was a mural on the iconic 8 metre x 12 metre wall at Urban Spree, Berlin (2020), while other career highlights include the exhibitions Reality Check (Purga Artspace, in the 2024 Ubud Writers & Readers Festival), Amid the Alien Corn (KW Institute for Contemporary Art, Berlin, 2023), 15th Asian Art Biennale (Dhaka, 2012), Basa-Basi / Chit-Chat (ART SG with ISA Art Gallery, 2023) and In Conversation: FX Harsono x Ida Lawrence (Fairfield City Museum & Gallery, Sydney, 2019). A graduate of the National Art School, Sydney, she also studied at Sydney College of the Arts and Institut Seni Indonesia, Yogyakarta. Lawrence was a recipient of the Marten Bequest Scholarship for Painting and is an alumna of the BPA// Berlin program for artists. She often collaborates, notably with Woven Kolektif, and her first childhood dog was named after the painter Georgia O'Keefe because they both liked bones.
